

For every yolk
t. This should color enough.
te and blue flow-
e nice touches as e flowers may be ome by, but you
blue hydrangeas,

TIQUES

W HOPE

ANTIQUE FEST

ay, May 25

AM - 4 PM

rs & Under Tents
tain or Shine
Appraisals Available
e-Solebury H.S. Field Bridge St (Route 179)
ew Hope, PA
ion $6 ($5 with ad)
er 16 Free—Free Parking Show Management
(15) 862-5828
quiltfest.com

SIGN

Featuring Bertich
Legacy
93-8624

Sage sings at HoVal for the children of war

By: KARA
FITZPATRICK
Post Correspondent

Close your eyes. It's a glorious May evening and you are at Hopewell Valley Central High School listening to the uplifting and funky sounds of a local band. But, at the same time you are in the Middle East assisting children who have been subjected to the devastating circumstances of war in their homeland. How is this possible?

Maybe this paragraph should begin by instructing you to now open your eyes, but since you have gotten this far, that can go unsaid. You just want to know how you can have an enjoyable evening while at the same time doing something that can be beneficial to children in need.

It's called "Keep the

"Keep the Beat" takes place on Friday, May 23 at Hopewell Valley Central High School and starts at 3 p.m., with Sage performing at 8 p.m.

Beat," an event organized by the Students United Network at Hopewell Valley Central High School and it takes place on Friday May 23. This event is a marathon of music to raise money for War Child, a non-profit foundation based in Canada that assists thousands of youth around the world in coping and recovering from the brutal effects of living in a war-affected country.

"War Child Canada believes music, media, and new technology have an important role to play in raising awareness and providing assistance to children affected by war and other forms of violence," states their website. (www.warchild.ca)

Hopewell Valley senior and member of the Students United Network, Amanda Blount says, "We are encouraging not only students, but everyone in our community to come out to the BBQ and concert to help us raise money and to have a great, music filled evening."

The headlining band for this event is the New Hope, PA-based band called Sage. Three mem-

(Continued on page 24)

BON APPÉTIT magazine
September 2002
Great American Neighborhood Restaurant
Main Street
Euro-American Bistro & Bar
PRIVATE ROOMS • OUTDOOR TERRACE
301 north harrison street 921-2779

Memorial Day Blossoms

Marathon of music at CHS

(Continued from page 4)

members of the band are Hopewell alumni, and wanted to take the opportunity to spread awareness and support for the cause.

Tim Nayfield, a lead vocalist and guitar player in the band says they often do benefits to help out the community. "It's a big part of our band to give back with music," he says.

Sage's music has been explained as a diverse mix that merges a variety of styles such as funk, reggae, rock, ska, and others together to get a sound that is said by band members to send the crowd "into a frenzy of dance and excitement." They have shared the stage with such artists as The Wailers, Deep Banana Blackout, Jimmy Cliff, and more.

Nayfield is also a preschool music teacher and feels that influences some of his style, "it's a hybrid of all music," the musician says.

Sage is a four-piece rock band that consists of members Marc Gallo, Tim Nayfield, Gabe Rohmann, and Dave "Tree" Ryden. In April 2003, the band released their self-titled album which consists of two CD's that were recorded in front of a live audience at SweetCreek studios in Pennsylvania.

"Keep the Beat" takes place on Friday, May 23 at Hopewell Valley Central High School and starts at 3 p.m., with Sage performing at 8 p.m. There will be a barbecue with food available.

It costs seven dollars to get in to the event with $5 from every ticket going to War Child.

If you're looking for a way to help a good cause without forgoing your Friday night fun, this is for you.

For more information on the event and Sage go to www.sageband.com.

As Nayfield puts it, "It will be a good time, with some fun exploratory music and you will be supporting a good cause so you can feel good about where your money is going."

Students take the challenge participated in the Middle School Design Challenge on and are Ben Jarrett, Eric Lui, Archie Rachakonda